

The Crittenden Press

ISSUED WEEKLY.

R. C. WALKER, Publisher.

The Hopkins county teachers have a library of more than 500 volumes.

It appears that the much talked of extension of the O. V. has at last begun to extend.

The commissioners appointed by the Governor to revise the General Statutes have begun their work.

The Fulton Graphic hears that Hon. Jas. B. Garnett, of Trigg county, will be a candidate for Congress.

They do say the turkeys and chickens are roosting nearer the ground since the whipping post law has been published.

The Grand Rivers boomers are pushing forward. A big carriage factory is the latest addition to the future great.

The Ohio campaign is warming up, and the Democrats have a fighting chance to win, and their feathers are ruffled for the fray.

Evansville's defaulting bank teller, Ritter, goes to the penitentiary for six years. He misappropriated $75,000 of the bank's fund.

The "Tale of Two Cities" is the romantic name assumed by the Times-Enterprise at Eddyville. One-half of the paper is dated at Eddyville and the other at Kuttawa.

Commissioner of Agriculture Wilson estimates the tobacco crop of 1891 at 185,680,212 pounds—an excess of 1,326,280 over the average crop for five years.

A Marshall county man returned his son to the penitentiary for $50 reward for the escaped convict. For meanness he beats the man who pastured goats on his grand-mother's grave.

The county court of claims convenes next Monday. There will be no worry about the poll-tax. It cannot exceed $1.50 and be lawful, nor can it be less and be sensible, considering the county's financial condition.

The State supports a colored normal school, and it is located at Frankfort. Last year the attendance was 77, and the graduates 13. Considering the colored population of the State, this is not a large attendance.

The Madisonville Hustler is responsible for this item concerning matters at Frankfort:

"Mrs. Governor Brown has given to understand that when they call at the Mansion, either on business or pleasure that no liquor will be provided for their detention."

Governor Brown is not as hard-hearted as his Republican opponents thought when he was on the stump. He granted sixteen pardons during his first month as Governor to prisoners in the Frankfort and Eddyville penitentiaries. Most of them who received the favor were in ill-health and some in a dying condition.

We anticipated that some Kentucky papers would refer to our recent little whipping post escapade as a piece of barbarism that should be killed with the sledge hammer of civilization, but so far there has been no demand for a cessation of the war. Crittenden has declared against petty thieves. A number of papers have referred to the incident without expression of opinion.

Lieut. Gov. Jones, of New York, the man who wrote "Cleveland a letter, warning him 'hands off' in the fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor is out in a d d declaring that if Flower is elected Governor, it means Flower for President. Mr. Jones is a great and wise man, but there are a few millions in the country greater and wiser than he. The party in New York is harmonious, Jones excepted.

It is gratifying to note that all of our mining enterprises did not die with the Princeton, Marion & Ohio River railroad. It was a sad day for Crittenden when Maj. Campbell died, because time has shown that no other man could manage the enterprises he had on foot, and his success while living, showed that he would have materialized these enterprises had he lived. Some man may yet be raised up to lead in the development of our resources.

The city of Covington held an election by secret ballot Saturday. The Democrats had a sweeping victory. Referring to the effect of the secret ballot the Newport Journal says:

"The ballot will compel the nomination of the very best men in the Democratic party and the Republican. Independent candidates there may be; but no matter what the name of the ticket, unless good men are on it the ticket will go down, in municipal elections for a certainty."

The Covington Commonwealth wants the state to have an inspector of whiskey as well as a tobacco inspector. It says:

"This is of even more importance, for tobacco is not drugged like whiskey. The compounders and dealers are administering slow poison to the people daily, and swindling them with fake brands, and if there is any change called for at all, it should be made right here, where there is undoubtedly a crying need for protection from practices that are altogether evil."

There is a great deal more truth than speculation in these words. The long effort to abolish the use of liquor as a beverage has been a poor success at best, and its ultimate triumph is in a far distant day, when calculated by even its most sanguine votaries, and it would be humane to diminish the amount of suffering by curtailing the amount of poison sold under the name of whiskey.

Col. Oscar Turner's Candidacy. The Louisville Commercial says: "If Col. Oscar Turner begins farming operations in Ballard county next spring the signs are sure that he will make the race for congress in the First district, although a resident of Jefferson county. Keep an eye on the 'old bull of Ballard' and about June 1st he will be seen on his Ballard farm attire in a hickory shirt and a patched pair of pants 'bossin' round and cussin'." In August he will be found in pretty much the same garb making speeches over the district. Things though have changed with the old bolter since Betsey died. He has not the hold on the farmers that he once had, besides several henchmen, one of whom was noted for not being able to speak five words without saying 'Turner, are no more.'"

Governor Campbell's opponents in Ohio are evidently hard pressed for campaign material, and have the choice of retracting a story they have published or defending a libel suit. The Commercial Gazette republishes from a New York paper a statement that Campbell is in debt $50,000 which was incurred by gambling in stocks, and that he owes Senator Brice $10,000. Brice telegraphs that it is a lie; Campbell has given the Commercial Gazette the choice of retracting or going into court, and has instructed his New York lawyer to draw a suit against the New York paper unless it retracts. With such a fertile field as the tariff, its strange that McKinley and his friends can not rely upon their boasted advantage in its cultivation for success.

Adj. Gen. Gross may not have to face the belching cannon or dance to the music of smaller fire arms in serving the State in his official capacity as commander of our militia, nevertheless he is already in a battle that shows a superior generalship in the eyes of the taxpayers. A bill of expenses for a recent encampment of some of the citizen-soldiers was brought to the Gen. Gross for endorsement; the bill called for $4178.63; instead of endorsing the officer cut down to $2,000. Among the items disallowed were ice cream, pears, bananas, candies, etc. Now it is shameful that the mighty warriors must go without these substantial, muscle-producing bills of fare, but the soldier's life is one of hardship and privations, ours must learn this sooner or later. There is no help for it in this case, unless the school teachers will agree to credit the state for their salary, so that the available cash in the treasury may be used to purchase only for the soldiers. The question should be brought up at the next Teachers Meeting. While it deserves to be tested on its own merits, the discussion would incidentally show the amount of patriotism the teacher has, it will show whether he prefers to fill his own pocket with the filthy dollar, or give the patriotic stomach of the soldier the light-producing product of the confederator.

The Paducah Standard reports that Marion has gone dry. Not much, quart measures are still shedding copious showers and will continue to do so until Circuit Court meets in December, any way.

The revival of the whipping-post in Kentucky is not pleasant to think of, and it cannot last. The colored colonists of Kentucky have a high standing all over this country for dignity and courage, and the news that one of them has been legally whipped on his bare back or merely unparaphrasing a turkey is revolting with a just sense of the unfitness of thing. No human citizen could be whipped, and a Kentucky colonel, white or black, is certainly the equal of any Roman citizen who ever strutted in Caesar's triumphs. St. Louis Republic.

Shot May Prove Fatal. Cadiz, Ky., Oct. 5.—Steven Austin, candidate for circuit court clerk of this county, and John Kenney, a prospective candidate for Sheriff, met at Wadlington's store, known as Wring no office, Saturday afternoon, and for a few words from Austin to Kenney, they drew their pistols and commenced firing. Each emptied his pistol. Kenney escaped unhurt. One shot in Austin's side may prove fatal.

MORMON MISSIONARIES.

Seven of Joseph Smith's Followers Hold A Conference at Oakland Church.

Last week the PRESS learned that a meeting of Mormon preachers was to be held at Oakland, and a reporter was dispatched to that place to learn something of these wanderers and of their work.

Oakland is a neat little frame church house about seven miles east of Marion. It was built by the Universalist some sixteen years ago, after a time the builders became somewhat disorganized, and now the doors are open to whosoever sect that chooses to use it properly for the worst of God. This fact probably drew the Mormon preachers to friendly portals for the purpose of talking over the effect of their labors in Kentucky and Tennessee. The business meeting Saturday was attended by seven of these missionaries, and as they evidently prefer to be alone on that occasion, they were not intruded upon.

They are all from Utah and have traveling and preaching over Kentucky and Tennessee. Wherever they find the people friendly enough to listen, they preach, and whenever they find that a community prefers "their room to their company" they "fold their tent like Arabs and as quietly steal away." It soon became noise abroad in the neighborhood that these itinerants would preach on Sunday, accordingly a large gathering to hear them. Three discourses were made by as many discourses, each more or less along the same line, and permit the writer to say that they said some mighty good things. They took no text from the Bible, but their discourses were not wild nor scattering, but were confined mainly to three things, namely Faith, Repentance and Baptism.

On the first, faith, the say "the principle of faith is the moving cause of all action. A man must have faith to believe that God will answer his prayers before he will offer them. It requires faith to accomplish any given work to which we set our hands."

On repentance they preach this: "Repentance we believe to be sorrow for and turning from sin; not mourning and groaning over the past, and continue the same way of living, but to be honest, quit lying, drinking, swearing, stealing and be virtuous, charitable, forgiving, and serve God in spirit and in truth—this is repentance."

On baptism they hold: The necessity for baptism was plainly taught by our Savior and the apostles. Comparatively speaking, it stood in the same light to the kingdom of God that the oath of allegiance stands to any temporal government."

The congregation listened to these things patiently and not with disapproval, but wanted to hear about some other doctrines of the "Latter day Saints, that of a plurality of wives, for instance. One of the preachers, who appeared to be higher in ecclesiastical authority than the others, seemed to anticipate our wants, and he took the stand and said that they used to teach polygamy, allowing a man to have more than one wife, it was able to support more than one, but now as the laws of the country forbid it, they no longer taught nor practiced it; they believed in being subservient to the laws of the country in which they lived.

They thanked the congregation for its attention, and, leaving a sharp sprinkling of their literature behind, they departed for other fields.

Obituary.

Miss Nellie Duke Hayes died at her home near Mari n, Ky., Friday evening, Sept. 18, 1891, after a protracted illness. She was the daughter of M. B. and Anna H. Haynes, and was born April 15, 1862.

Her death was not unexpected by her friends. For more than two years her life was one of patient suffering, battling against the monster disease that, baffling like the best medical aid, the kind attention of friends and the hopes and tears of loved ones, finally ended her life; and the gentle spirit, which alone can defy death and disease, severing the frail bonds which held it here, took its flight to a better world than this.

Nellie was a general favorite. Gifted by nature with a lively disposition, amiable and intelligent, she won the hearts of many friends, and those who knew her best loved her most. Cheerful in manners, bright in intellect, gifted in conversation, she was the light of the social circle and the home fireside. But she is gone; and, in going, leaves many sorrowing friends and a sad home.

When scarcely more than a child, meekly obeying the Divine command to "seek first the kingdom of heaven," she gave her young heart to the Saviour, joining the Methodist church under the ministry of Rev. J. D. Crenshaw. True to her professions, her short life was a truly Christian one, having never, she said, even in the most trying hours of her afflictions, doubted the Saviour's love or her own acceptance. Her death, like her life, was a triumph of the Christian's faith. The world, with all its prospects was given up; every earthly ambition and every loving friend were surrendered, and she was resigned to go. "I am only waiting," she said, "for the Saviour's call."

"The Saviour then will come, And lead his loving, waiting child Into his blessed home." And the call was given. The summons came. And it was to give her up—she who had been so gentle, so loving, so kind. But the sad hour came, and a dark one it was to her weeping friends. But not to her. "There's nothing dark," she said. All was peace, serenity, hope, triumph. She remained conscious to the last; and while at the gateway between two worlds, with the light of immortality even, then shining on her, she would endeavor to point out to our blinded eyes hovering forms from the other shore, who, like ourselves, had gathered around the bed side of the expiring loved one. It was soon over. The icy hand was laid gently on her and she fell asleep. She was dead. The gentle spirit had flown with its heavenly attendants to the house not made with hands.

The remains were taken to Harriane the next day for burial. A large number of her friends, relatives and associates followed sorrowfully to the grave. The funeral sermon, a touching discourse on the Christian's reward, was preached by Rev. R. S. Clark, after which kind hands laid her away.

So, dear Nellie, our sweet angel sister, sleep on. We shall meet again. Death can not part us forever, nor the grave chill our love. In that pure world, where happy angels dwell, we shall meet again in the grand by and by.

Yes, Nellie is gone, "She passed from us."

To dwell upon a fairer shore," Crowned with the Saviour's jewels there, She'll live forever more.

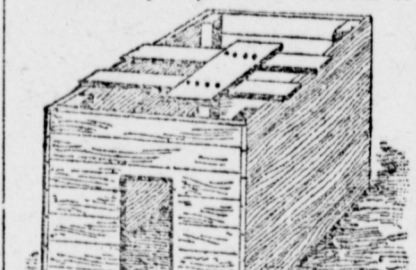

HER BROTHER.

FILLING SILOS.

A Plan Which Does Away with Tramping the Silage.

Not only has the silo and the material put into it undergone a great change within a few years, but the methods of

A LABOR SAVING SILO.

Filling the silo have departed from the original idea. In many sections of the country the excessive tramping of the silage as it is placed in the pit is not followed except in extreme cases. A very general plan now does away with all tramping except a very little along the walls to overcome the friction of the silage against the walls. Some do not practice even this to any great extent. The silage as it comes from the carrier is usually allowed to drop in the center of the pit, and is then forced about the pit by a man whose business it is to keep the silage level and the sides tramped.

A far better way, says The Southern Farm, is to lay two scantlings across the top of the silo, three feet apart, as is illustrated in the accompanying cut. On these lay some short boards so as to make a platform at least three and a half feet square. As the silage falls upon this table it quickly forms a pyramid and is slanted to about every part of the silo and needs very little after attention. An hour during the day is about all the labor needed in a 10 by 10 foot silo. The silage will be much the highest at the walls, and this extra weight then forces down the silage about all that is needed. Sometimes the silage will not fall uniformly, and it may need a little spreading.

The authority quoted says: "This is a great labor saver, and in our silos not a bushel has been lost in corners or sides in two winters with this plan of self scattering and packing, and it has saved the expense of one man, save the last day, when the neumes of the silage to the platforms did not longer give the falling silage a chance to scatter sufficiently. Those who practice the no-tramping plan are wholly in favor of it, and it is rare that one hears of anything but success with it, while those who advocate much tramping in corners and sides do have more or less trouble with mold and loss of silage. The center of a pit, where it is not trampled, always keeps. If the walls are perfect why should not the sides and corners keep as well untrod as does the center? It will if the walls are air proof."

A Fatal Fight—Two Women.

A fight occurred on Eagle Creek Monday morning between Belle Jamison and Mrs. Belle White, wife of Bob White and daughter of Jas Colbert, in which the former was killed. The particulars as far as we have been able to learn are as follows: Miss Jamison went to Mrs. White's house and raised a quarrel with her, pulling her hair and tearing her clothes. Not content, she opened Mrs. White's bureau and took there from a revolver and fired twice at Mrs. White, who succeeded in wrenching the pistol from her hand firing twice at her. Both balls took effect, one in the breast and the other in the back of the head, which went clear through and came out between the eyes, killing her instantly.—Hardin County (Ill.) Independent.

The first day was spent in an Elders' and Deacons' meeting. This was a meeting of remarkable interest, and subjects were fully and freely discussed pertaining to every department of church management. W. P. Black, the chairman of the Association, succeeded admirably in getting all present to take part in the exercises, and drawing out the best thoughts on the most important subjects.

We had quite a full representation, all the congregations being represented but three, and two of these are in a dis organized condition. We had with us the following visiting brethren: Rev. J. H. Miller, of St. Louis, Mo., and Revs. J. R. Templeman, W. W. Wynns, and R. Anthony.

Most of the enterprises of our church were fully discussed. An excellent sermon was preached by Rev. M. E. Chappell on the support of the ministry.

Much interest was manifested in regard to the work of Missions. The churches were urged to contribute the amount apportioned them by General Assembly and Presbytery. The causes of Church Extension and Ministerial Relief also received special attention.

A Sunday-school Institute was held on Wednesday evening, in which subjects of special importance to Sunday-school workers were discussed.

The subject of "Infant Baptism" was discussed at length by Rev. J. F. Price, and the subject of Sanctification was well and ably discussed by Rev. M. E. Chappell.

The ladies had a missionary meeting Thursday evening, which was full of interest and manifested the true missionary spirit.

The next meeting of Presbytery will be held with Liberty congregation.

ASSIGNED.

Frank McCoy, the Saw Mill Man, Goes to the Wall.

Mr. Frank McCoy, who has been operating a large saw mill at Blackford, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors Monday.

J. W. Winfree, of Hopkinsville is the assignee. The deed of assignment places in the assignee's hands the following property:

80,000 to 100,000 feet of saw logs in Crittenden county; about 80,000 feet of saw logs in Webster county; steam saw mill at Blackford and lease upon six acres of land upon which the mill is situated; 650 acres of land in Christian county, subject to lease; steam saw mill in Christian county.

Mr. McCoy estimates his indebtedness at from $6,000 to $7,000, and thinks he will pay 100 cents on the dollar. He attributes his failure to the fact that sickness in his family has kept him away from his business which was of such a character that he demanded his closest attention. He thus got behind, and when a number of suits were brought against him this week he concluded to make the assignment.

The Moore-Walker Nuptials.

Wednesday evening Oct. 7, the Methodist church was the scene of the happy consummation of one of those events which unite two hearts and two lives as one. To make the surroundings partake of the cheerfulness of the occasion, the church was beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens by the young friends of the happy couple. Pretty wreaths of flowers and graceful trolleys of evergreens met the eye in every hand. At half past seven the organ pealed forth the wedding march, as the party entered and passed slowly up the aisle to the altar, and there midst the grotto of roses the three couple turned and faced the large audience. On the right were Mr. E. T. Donakey and Miss Mattie Kevil, on the left Mr. H. V. Stone and Miss Grace Perkins, in the center were the contracting parties, Mr. David B. Moore and Miss Kate D. Walker, the cynosure of all eyes. Just as the note of the organ died away, Rev. S. K. Breeding stood in front of the couple, and with a beautiful ceremony, plighted the vows that are to bind them through life, and they passed from the house bearing with them the benedictions of their hundreds of friends.
